

Underclassmen Showcase Powered by EFT: Who Stood Out DB

Thread started by Edgy Tim on 01/24/2022

Overall I came away feeling good about how this camp ran on Monday on several levels. We had nearly 400 kids and we found a way to best manage reps, making sure we took full advantage of the size of the Max Center in McCook. One of my top priorities in this yearly camp is to find the best possible way to get kids reps and work....and we had several new drills and work fixes that overall accomplished that goal. We stagger check in times and we split up the kids into three separate groups (OL/DL then RB/TE/LB and finally QB/WR/DB) over the entire day. This allows us more field to use....and also limits the crunch of kids in lines, over filling a facility during COVID times and helps us just better manage drills and more position specific work.

As always with any event I host.....I truly am running around the entire day doing a million things at once and do not get see as many kids as in depth as I would if I was not hosting a camp/showcase. I have always believed that being upfront and honest with you is the only way to go (and I know of one self-proclaimed expert/guru who has never worked an entire full camp day yet still seems to find a way to make full evaluations from a camp showing). Don't believe everything you read folks.

I rely on what I see myself along with feedback from each positional coach working the camp. Below is my best effort on who I felt Stood Out on Monday. Look for this to grow into a 2-3 part series and I hope to have this completed by Thursday or Friday at the latest.

Surges played both running back and safety in 2021 and I already liked him on film before even working out at this camp. Surges is a very strong player fundamentally and was pointed out by the coaches as a hard worker who also learned things quickly and was able to make adjustments. I can see Surges being a bit of a tweener positionally (RB/S/OLB?) but his overall game, fundamentals and work ethic is pretty noticeable. Surges will need to add a bit more strength at the higher college level, but the positive is
